

Our Black babies are nearly 60% more likely to be premature* due to discrimination.

Studies show the stressful experience of discrimination increases the risk of preterm birth in Black moms-to-be. You and your baby have the right to the best treatment health care providers have to offer.

Find out what treatment you should expect for you and your baby at BlackLegacyNowSD.com

Tomorrow's Black legacy deserves protecting today.

Funded by the California Department of Public Health, Maternal, Child & Adolescent Health Division

*Source: Based on comparison of African-American/Black and White 2016-2018 average preterm birth rates (11.2% vs. 7.2%, respectively). Data from State of California, Department of Public Health, Center for Health Statistics and Informatics, California Comprehensive Birth Files. Statistics prepared by County of San Diego, Health and Human Services Agency, Public Health Services.

Tracee and Noah, Paradise Hills